

The modern theory of quasiconformal and Sobolev mappings in metric spaces originates in the work of Heinonen and Koskela in the mid-1990s. I will give a broad survey of the development of the field over the past 25 years, focusing on questions related to higher integrability of derivatives, dimension distortion, and absolute continuity.